As a child I watched in awe as the gray Kansas background burst into full color as Dorothy stepped out of the door of her house into a brilliantly colored Munchkin Land. It was magical! It made my heart soar! From that time on rainbows and songs about rainbows have held a special place in my heart.

Little did I dream that my lifelong fascination and connections to rainbows would culminate fifty years later with bringing forth information about how we are each a living rainbow, reflecting the brilliance of each color.

I am a Spiritual Intuitive. I intuitively receive information from my Spirit guides. Over the past year I have been bringing forth information about the power of working consciously with the rainbow and the vibrations of the colors within the chakra containers.

Some believe the rainbow is a promise from the Divine and that somewhere over the rainbow they will find their pot of gold, their perfect life...someday. The simple truth is that someday is now. The rainbow is a promise of union with the Divine and our pot of gold can be found every day as we learn to live the full spectrums of the rainbow's colors. There isn't a special place of happiness and joy over the rainbow. It is all found within you.

The colors of the rainbow reflect balance. Each color reflects it's particular vibration. Each color compliments the other colors. Balanced, they reflect a big beautiful full rainbow of radiating living color. So it is with each of us. We have all chosen different color combinations to reflect. When we are not balanced in all areas, some of our colors are very dim. Other colors shine too bright and lead to burn out. As we learn to work with the rainbow of colors we bring ourselves into balance. When we are balanced, grounded in the red color of the root chakra container and connected to the source with the purple color of the crown chakra container, and balanced in all the rainbow colors in between, we will have achieved union with the Divine.

Somewhere over the rainbow is here and now is the time for humanity to explore the rainbow connection to use the power of the colors of the rainbow to live the ultimate union, the connection to the Divine while we are in physical form.

The Living Rainbow workshop gives participants simple easy to grasp information, techniques, and insights into consciously balancing their colors and discovering their pot of gold.
